AUSTRIA DESERTS BOSNIA TO SEND FORCES TO NORTH

Kaiser Said to Have Withdrawn Fifth Army From Alsace to Rush North to His Harassed Troops—Trains Held Up by Movements of the Soldiers.

RUSSIAN REPORT.

PARIS, Aug. 29 [Associated Press].—The French War Office gave out the following official statement this afternoon: "The Russian army has completely invested Koenigsberg and occupied Allenstein, both in East Prussia. The Germans continue to retreat."

ST. PETERSBURG (via Rome), Aug. 29 [United Press].—Minister of Foreign Affairs Sazonoff this afternoon officially announced that the Russian army of invasion in Eastern Prussia has occupied the strong fortified town of Allenstein. [Both the German and Russian Governments have to-day issued claims regarding Allenstein. The Germans say the Russians there, numbering 200,000 men, were defeated. Russia, through Foreign Minister Sazonoff, now claims it has captured the town.]

PARIS, Aug. 29 [United Press].—The War Office this afternoon issued a statement announcing that three squadrons of German bicycle dragoons had been routed by Russian cavalry from Petropof.

That a general battle is in progress throughout Galicia, with the centre of the Russian attack directed against Lemberg, was the admission of the War Office this evening.

The battle front extends over a distance of 200 miles and the forces engaged are very large.

It is understood here that the Austrian army had been broken by the Russian attack and that a general battle then began.

GERMAN REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. [Associated Press].—A despatch from Berlin to the German Embassy says:

"German forces in East Prussia, commanded by Gen. von Hindenburg, have defeated, in a three-days' battle near Gigenburg and Ortelsburg, south of Allenstein, the Russian army which was proceeding from the River Narew, five army corps (200,000 men) and three cavalry divisions (25,000 men) strong. The German forces in pursuit of the defeated army crossed the Russian frontier."

Alenstein is about sixty miles south of Koenigsberg.

ADRIATIC, ARMED AS CRUISER, BRINGS HOME 1,762 REFUGEES

Twice She Stripped for Action, but Supposed Enemies Were Friends—More Tales of Hardships and Abuse in Flight.

The long gray muzzles of four six-inch guns spiking out from bow and stern of the White Star liner Adriatic as she came up through the fog to her dock early to-day brought the reality of the world war across the water very close to New York. The broad blocks of the weapons were hooded in canvas, but their wicked muzzles were sternly ahead and behind as if still yearning for a brush with the prow of a German cruiser.

Twice during the trip over from Liverpool the 1,762 passengers, mostly American refugees from the war zone, who crowded the Adriatic's accommodations to the last inch, had their hearts in their mouths when they saw the tarpaulin hoods leap from the business ends of these guns and ammunition laid out for service. It was on Wednesday night when the lookout in the Adriatic's crow's nest shouted down to the bridge, "Man-of-war on the port bow, sir!"

Instantly a quiet order was given by Capt. B. F. Hayes and the ship's course was shifted three points away from that followed by the dim gray shape in the distance. A whistle sounded down in the lower hold, where the magazine is located, and the thin squeak of tackle-blocks brought passengers crowding to the decks. Up through the forward and aft hatches came the ammunition hoists, each heavy with the brass and steel of six-inch shells. Second Officer Gilbert of the Royal Naval Reserve took command of the gun squad of twenty seamen of the Reserve. Breach blocks were cleared, shells were driven home.

"Every passenger leave the decks and go below!" the captain ordered, and in less than a minute decks were cleared and there was no movement but the swinging of those long steel muzzles to port, covering the ghost shape of the distant vessel.

Then came a flashlight cutting through the dark, groping and dashing down the deck until it rested on the staff at the after rail. That searchlight pointed a mute inquiry. Capt. Hayes ordered the red ensign of Britain run up. Just as he did so the wireless began to chirp and stutter.

The hostile ship was the British cruiser Essex.

"Way clear," came her laconic assurance and the tarpaulins were put back on the gun breeches again.

Near noon on the following day came the second scare. A dark haze lay on the ocean, and the Adriatic was steaming through the mist, her fog horn silent. Suddenly a dull shape showed less than a quarter mile to starboard. Capt. Hayes ordered a shift in the Adriatic's course.

MOB STORMS BANK AND GIVES BATTLE TO POLICE ON GUARD

Women in Mass Which Forms in Rutgers Square and Surges to East Broadway.

A mob of five thousand, mostly men, but some women in it, charged from Rutgers Square this forenoon across East Broadway to the doors of the bank of M. & L. Jarmulowsky. Every one was bent on forcing from Joseph Kahn, Deputy Bank Superintendent, a promise for the quick release of his deposits. In its angry excitement it was feared the mob might attack the clerks at work in the bank and attempt to seize the vaults by force.

The policemen stationed at the door were taken by surprise and rushed back into the lobby. Only sharp punches and smashing swings of their clubs saved them from being knocked down. The sound of the blows and of the leaders of the mob yelling in pain started a savage melee and filled the street with a tangle of those who wanted to fight on and those who were struggling madly to escape.

Capt. Brady of the Madison street station went to the bank with his reserves after calling on Inspector Walsh for help. There were soon a hundred policemen in the battle and

NEW ARMY IS CALLED TO FIELD BY FRANCE AND HURRIED NORTH

London Reports That the Allies Have Evacuated Boulogne—Berlin Declares That British Army Has Been Driven Back Another Twenty Miles by Kaiser's Troops.

NEWS PARTLY CONFIRMED BY THE LONDON PAPERS

Despatches From Paris and Rome Say That Three German and Two Austrian Army Corps Have Crossed the Rhine and Are Heading Through Alsace for Belfort.

BRITISH REPORT.

LONDON, Aug. 29 [Associated Press].—A Central News despatch says that Boulogne has been evacuated by the allied troops.

LONDON, Aug. 29 [United Press].—The Times correspondent at Paris cables that the British lines have been extended for some distance. The correspondents of the Express and Daily Mail say that the British have been forced back to a new line and that Cambrai is now held by the Germans in strong force.

[The above partly confirms the Berlin newspaper report that the British army was forced back to St. Quentin.]

According to the Express correspondent the Germans are threatening to raid all northern France. He says that Boulogne is threatened by German cavalry forces and that notices have been posted there warning the inhabitants not to resist any German advance.

The War Office professes to believe that the danger of immediate German occupancy of the French coast cities is past and that the German cavalry are now faced by a stronger force of French at the points of threatened danger.

FRENCH REPORT.

PARIS, Aug. 29 [Associated Press].—It is reported that a new army of a quarter of a million men has been formed to take the offensive against the German right wing in the north.

Train service between Paris and Boulogne was suspended to-day until further notice. It is presumed here that this step was taken because the Allied armies are about to engage the Germans on or near the railroad line running into Boulogne.

[The line of railroad communication between Paris and Boulogne runs from the French capital a little west of north to Beaulieu, and then continues a little east of north to Amiens. From Amiens the line runs northwest to Abbeville, and thence in a northerly direction along the coast to Boulogne.]

PARIS, Aug. 29 [United Press].—Indications of renewed activity by the German army in France have been reported to Gen. Joffrey the French aerial scouts.

Meanwhile the German flanks and lines of communication are again in danger. Rendered desperate by the reports
